

Nitin S. Damle MD, MS, FACP
President
American College of Physicians

Dr. Nitin Damle is President of the American College of Physicians (ACP), the nation's largest medical specialty organization. He has been a Fellow (FACP) of the ACP since 1992.

Dr. Damle is the founding and managing partner at South County Internal Medicine Inc. in Wakefield, Rhode Island since 1988. He is past President of the Rhode Island Medical Society and past President of the Medical Staff of the South County Hospital Health Care System and member of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Damle also serves as Clinical Assistant Professor of Medicine at the Alpert Medical School of Brown University.

Dr. Damle has authored several peer reviewed articles, and he writes medical columns and commentary on health care related issues. He lives with his family in Jamestown, Rhode Island.