

Jenny Mullen
Team Lead, Childhood Immunizations Communications
NCIRD Health Communication Science Office

In her role at NCIRD, Jenny Mullen is involved in efforts to develop research-based messages and materials and conduct communications activities to protect babies from vaccine preventable diseases. This includes activities to raise awareness among parents and healthcare professionals about the value and benefits of on-time vaccination according to the recommended immunization schedule, as well as efforts addressing the recommendation that pregnant women receive the Tdap vaccine during the 3rd trimester of each pregnancy to protect young babies from pertussis.
