Manager, Pharmacy Care *and
Manager, Foundation Programs
National Association of Chain Drug Stores (NACDS)

Sara Rubin manages education, research, quality, and programmatic initiatives related to pharmacy and public health. Prior to joining NACDS, Ms. Rubin spent nearly 3 years at the National Association of Country and City Health Officials where she managed federally-funded grants focused on pandemic preparedness and private sector partnerships. She also launched NACCHO's Policy & Practice Scholars Program, which provides academic-based public health learning opportunities for more than a dozen graduate students annually. She has also held positions related to emergency preparedness and public health at a congressional commission focused on preventing biological terrorism, the presidential commission for the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Ms. Rubin co-founded and moderates the first, standing Twitter chat about public health (#pubht | @PubHealthTalks), which brings together dozens of public health professionals globally every first and third Monday of each month at 9pm EDT. In 2008, she served as a gubernatorial fellow at the Florida Division of Emergency Management and later was selected as a 2012 Emerging Leader in Biosecurity through the UPMC Center for Health Security.

She earned a Master of Public Health and a Master of Arts in international affairs at the George Washington University in 2011.
