

Jeanne Santoli, MD, MPH
Deputy Director
Immunization Services Division
National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

As deputy director for the Immunization Services Division, Dr. Santoli manages issues related to vaccine supply and assesses vaccine coverage. She researches barriers to immunizations and evaluates strategies to overcome them. She joined CDC in 1998 as a member of National Immunization Program's Health Services Research and Evaluation Branch.

Dr. Santoli is a graduate of Princeton University. She earned her medical degree from Johns Hopkins School of Medicine and her Masters degree in Public Health from Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health.