

Erin Connelly
Lead, Health Communication Science Office
National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases (NCIRD)
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

At CDC Ms. Connelly works closely with the center's senior leaders to improve integrated management of NCIRD's health communication, marketing, vaccination campaigns, and public affairs portfolio. She has extensive experience in leading, directing, planning, implementing, and evaluating comprehensive health communication and marketing programs, with specialized experience in health communication and public affairs to support sexual health, HIV prevention, and injury and violence prevention.

Before joining NCIRD in 2017, Ms. Connelly served as the Associate Director for Communication for CDC's National Center for Injury Prevention and Control. She joined CDC's Injury Center as the Deputy Associate Director for Communication in 2011. Prior to that, she worked at various levels in CDC's National Center for HIV/AIDS, Viral Hepatitis, STD and TB Prevention, where she worked on health communication campaigns, partnership development, stakeholder communication and issues management in support of HIV prevention. Ms. Connelly began her work at CDC with the Office of the Director in 1999.