

Danielle Casanova
Senior Director for Population Health Initiatives
AMGA and AMGA Foundation

In her capacity at AMGA, Ms. Casanova is responsible for establishing the population health initiatives' overall vision, and she provides oversight on all best practices learning collaborative and acclaim award activities. She leads strategic direction and planning of current and future quality collaboratives and the acclaim award program.

Ms. Casanova has spent 18 years in total working for healthcare associations developing, training, and implementing national healthcare programs for the American Diabetes Association and national population health and quality programs for AMGA.

She received her undergraduate degree in Biology with a concentration in Pre-Medicine and has a master's degree in Business Administration with a concentration in Healthcare Management.