

Benjamin Yarnoff, PhD
Senior Research Economist
RTI International

Mr. Yarnoff specializes in researching the costs and cost-effectiveness of clinical and public health programs. He has conducted several studies of the costs to medical practices of providing vaccinations and has conducted studies evaluating the costs of implementing Patient-Centered Medical Homes, CMS's Oncology Care Model and Accountable Health Communities Model, and CDC's Diabetes Prevention Program, Community Transformation Grants, Paul Coverdell Acute Stroke Program, and Sodium Reduction in Communities Program

Mr. Yarnoff's work is intended to inform practitioners and policymakers for program planning and sustainability.