

Kayla Calhoun
Health Scientist
Surveillance and Epidemiology Branch
Immunization Services Division
National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

Kayla Calhoun has worked in various roles at CDC over the past 11 years and is currently serving as a health scientist in CDC's Immunization Services Division. Since July 2022, she has managed ISD's omnibus surveys on vaccination attitudes and behaviors. She has a MS in Environmental Economics from the University of Georgia.