Boston, MA

Meredith is a partner at Conway Homer, P.C., where she focuses her practice on representing petitioners in the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program (NVICP). She earned her Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from Brown University, and her Juris Doctor, summa.cum.laude, from Suffolk University Law School, where she was a published member of the Journal of Health and Biomedical Law.

Meredith has over 15 years of experience practicing exclusively within the NVICP, a federal compensation program administered through the U.S. Court of Federal Claims. She currently serves as Secretary of the Court of Federal Claims Bar Association and chairs the Association's Newsletter Committee, overseeing publication of its quarterly newsletter. In addition, she serves on the Process Committee, a collaborative working group composed of representatives from the Office of Special Masters, the Department of Justice, and petitioners' counsel focused on addressing procedural matters within the NVICP.

Meredith brings a strong understanding of the legal, procedural, and policy issues shaping the NVICP, particularly as they relate to vaccine confidence, access, and public health.
