

Alex Garcia, MPH
Consultant
Putnam Associates

Alex Garcia, MPH, is a consultant at Putnam Associates advising pharmaceutical and biotech clients on strategy across vaccines, rare disease, and infectious disease. She brings a unique blend of consulting, public health research, and clinical operations experience shaping her perspective on the evolving drivers of public trust. Alex previously worked with the Unity Consortium on vaccine confidence initiatives and began her career in clinical management at Stony Brook Medicine. She holds a Master of Public Health from Columbia University with a concentration in Health Policy and Practice.