

Kenneth Izuora, MD, MBA
Professor of Medicine
UNLV

Dr. Ken Izuora is a Professor of Medicine at the University of Nevada Las Vegas (UNLV) School of Medicine, where he serves as Section Chief of Endocrinology and Program Director of the Endocrinology Fellowship training program. He received his medical degree from the University of Nigeria and MBA in Healthcare Administration from the University of Colorado, Denver. He completed residency training at the University of Rochester, Unity Health Program and Endocrinology fellowship at Emory University, Atlanta. He practices general academic endocrinology with research interest in diabetes and associated complications. He leads efforts to improve vaccinations at UNLV Health Endocrinology clinic. This effort is supported by the Specialty Societies Advancing Adult Immunizations grant, funded by the CDC and coordinated through the Council on Medical Specialty Societies and the American Association of Clinical Endocrinology.