

CDR Valerie Marshall, MPH, PMP, GWCPM
Deputy Director for National Vaccine Program
Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health in the Office of Infectious Disease and HIV/AIDS Policy, HHS

Valerie Marshall is the Deputy Director of the National Vaccine Program in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health in the Office of Infectious Disease and HIV/AIDS Policy. She has over 20 years of experience in research, government, and industry settings. During her 13-year tenure at the Office of Vaccines Research and Review in the Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research/FDA, she worked on the development of vaccines for public health emergencies of national and international scope, including tH1N1, Zika, Ebola, and COVID-19. She received an MPH from the George Washington University and BS from Morgan State University.