

Michael Melgar, MD
Medical Officer
Coronavirus and Other Respiratory Viruses Division, CDC

Michael Melgar is a medical officer in CDC's Coronavirus and Other Respiratory Viruses Division and serves as co-lead of the ACIP work group for RSV in adults. He attended medical school at the University of California San Francisco and completed training in internal medicine at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center in Baltimore. He then joined CDC in 2018 as an Epidemic Intelligence Service Officer, before deploying full time in the agency-wide COVID-19 response. In that capacity, worked in surveillance for Multisystem Inflammatory Syndrome in children and adults and in hospital-based surveillance for COVID-19.